

TELEGRAPHIC MESSAGES.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.]

BATHURST.

THURSDAY.

The second day's sport of the Spring Races was but poorly attended.

Ladies' Stakes.—Sir Hercules, 1; Paraguay, 2. Prince of Wales Stake.—Net, 1; Victoria, 2. Jockey Club Handicap.—The Moor, 1; Bracelet, 2; Headland, 3.

Tally-Ho Stakes.—Joe Miller, 1; Black Jack, 2.

GRAFTON.

THURSDAY.

The Platypus (s.) arrived yesterday, from the Richmond River, and sails again on Monday. The Grafton (s.) arrived from Sydney to-day, and sails on Saturday.

MELBOURNE.

THURSDAY, 6 P.M.

Mr. Davis, a proprietor of land fronting the Wellington Parade, has applied for an injunction to restrain the Government from selling the Parade. Judgment has been reserved.

Crise, charged with larceny in connection with his assigned estate, has been found guilty and sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

The Rev. Mr. Taylor sailed with his family for Robert Town, in the Southern Cross. Several members of his late congregation saw him off.

A sale of teas took place under the new regulations, at a slight reduction. A large sale of tobacco is reported—6d. to 1d. gold bar, 11d.

ARRIVED.—You Yangs (s.), from Sydney.

QUEENSLIFF.

THURSDAY.

ARRIVED.—Aldings (s.), from Adelaide.

SAILED.—Laughing Water, barque, for New South.

ADELAIDE.

THURSDAY.

News from Wentworth states that the rivers are falling, and a long season of low water is anticipated. The Northern Territory Bills have passed the Council.

The debate has been adjourned on Landover's motion, that it is inexpedient to appoint to any place of profit under the Government, any person who has held a seat in Parliament until twelve months after he had ceased to be a member of Parliament.

Dale, ex Peru, have been offered at auction, to-day. Only a small portion were sold at 5d.

The corn market is very firm; scarcity of freight prevents transactions for export.

RELEASEMENT OF FLETCHER WARD.—Mr. Charles Kidman has addressed a very numerous meeting of the friends of Fletcher Ward last evening, at Keary's Woolloomooloo Hotel, William-street. Mr. James Hart, M.L.A., was called upon to preside. Mr. Kidman, on opening his address, referred to the duties devolving upon him in the discharge of his office, and said it was not his intention to speak on that subject, but to look after the interests of his ward. This was the third time he had been before the electors, and had on two occasions entered very shortly before. In his first speech they left no better or more unanimous verdict than in his second. The electors did not for his own advantage, but with a view to all he could for a ward in which he had resided for twenty years, and when there was scarcely a street in it. Now there were streets in almost every part, and he had not been able to look after the interests of his ward during the past two years. Fletcher Ward would be second to none in the city. He defied any elector to come forward and say to his face that he had not attended to any particular wants when he had been responsible for the election of the members of parliament, and that he was better known. His special duty, as he regarded it, had been to look to the interests of the ward he represented; he did not consider he had any business to interfere with the work of his government, and that the electors must be left to look after their own affairs. He also stated that there were many minor improvements which, being done at a cost less than £20, did not appear upon the business paper. These works were not confined to particular streets, but were all over the ward. He then expressed his willingness to answer any question that might be put to him, and the following maters were examined in reply:—It had been circulated through the ward by some persons working for Mr. Oakley, that he (Mr. Kidman) had voted for the members of the working class, the result of such a statement was that it was the fact that it was moved on the 8th October, 1868, before he had a seat in the Council. If he had been there at the time he would have voted against it, and very likely it would not have been carried. In answer to the question as to the result of the election of the working class, he said he was in favour of anything that would benefit the working man. He did not oppose the opening of the committees to the public, but he voted against it, as he thought it would not be a great waste of time. With regard to the purpose to get the working class into the water rate, he stated that upon taking action in that matter, he found they could not be altered unless he was altered. As to the other rates being altered in an indirect way, like the sewerage rate, he pointed out that the water rates were not altered, and that the water rates of his Corporation had not power to reduce the amounts. He was in favour of the election of the Mayor by the electors. It was currently reported through the ward by some persons that he had voted for the present Political Association. He never believed that he did not know that he belonged to any association in the colony. In some discussions from the chairman, that gentleman alluded to the importance of the duties of aldermen in so large a city as Sydney, and spoke very favourably of the exertions made by Mr. Kidman in the discharge of his duties, and in promoting the health and comfort of the citizens. Most of the offices had worked their way up, were such as were fitted for places in the Council. There were several reasons why it was not open to the committee to be open to the public, and an important one was that the members of the Council would become known. As to the water rates, the St. Kilda had gone there not being aware what had taken place. Archdeacon Williams reports that thirty Europeans—men, women, and children—have been murdered, and ten houses burned; twenty friendly natives are supposed to have been murdered. Lieutenant Gasecock is in charge of the Europeans at the Blockhouse, and can hold his own for the present. Polai is calling out re-enforcements. The Superintendent has not received despatches.

DISASTROUS NEWS FROM NEW ZEALAND.

REVIEW.

CARMINA VARIA, being Miscellaneous Poems, by Justin Aubrey, 12mo, 348 pp. Dunedin [New Zealand]. Printed by Ferguson and Mitchell, Princes street.

POEMS, by Charles W. Purnell, 12mo, 116 pp. Christchurch [New Zealand]. Published for the Author by Stevens and Co., High-street.

TOM seems to be pro-minently an age of Shamus; Shamus Political, Shamus Artistic, and Shamus Literary—the last-named, being, of all others, perhaps, the most absolutely dreary kind of Shamus. It is bad, no doubt, for the Commonwealth that we should have Shamus Statesmen; men who persistently exhort and delude us all by pretending that they are just about to do that which they have no intention of doing, and that they know not how to do, even if they had ever so much the desire to do it happily accomplished. It is bad enough too to have Shamus Artists, who—with less idea of drawing than a second-class sign-painter, but provided with a good stock of assurance, an undeniably photographic apparatus, plenty of colouring matter, brushes, and canvas, and (above all!) a fine, bold, wooden touch—are perfectly ready to undertake any work, and will then invite criticism with a complacent smile because they must know that they are hopelessly beneath serious notice. These shams, and a thousand other such, are, of course, often very provoking, and, at times, to ruffus that "quiet mind" which it is so desirable for us to preserve under the most trying circumstances; but for a shamus that is as common as any other of the class, the "Literary Shamus" is about the most unbearable that can anywhere be met with. For the Literary Shamus is not an isolated individual but the member of a self-constituted body corporate, all as busy as ants upon some petty objects in which none but themselves are interested; the beauty, use, and importance of which can be appreciated only by themselves, and must, from the very nature of things, be the world at large remain for ever unknown. The Literary Shamus will cheerfully write for the editor of their brother shams in the same great coterie, and vociferously praise each other with tearful fervour which excites an awe-struck admiration in the uninited millions; they will even lecture upon each other's "sorrows" and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to sordid interest or puerile didacticism; a book, in which the writer can ignore literary merit and loudly canonise the perpetrators of doggerel as great people in the world—or small people in their own set. Like ants (of the large, red kind) these busy creatures are constantly helping each other, and like ants—as if to manifest an apocalyptic impartiality—they occasionally, for some inextricable reason or other, pounce upon an offending party, and dispatch him with a ferocity which is positively appalling. Candour obliges one, however, to state that if the doggerel-writer occupies any high social, or political position, the Literary Shamus seldom, or ever, molests the offender. The fitful murmuring of his streams of poetry may go on as unheeded as the gurglings of that Odorous Rivulet, not unknown in history, which gradually intermingles with the waters of Port Jackson near Fort Macquarie. Nay, they will even listen to such other's "sorrows" as to fearlessly dogmatise about So and So's style, and fight for each other with a persistency that is worthy of a far better cause. What a chance for one of these poor, despotic shams when some odd accident has enabled him to "write a book," which other people will (possibly) have to pay for; a book in which he can carry out the small spite of his small-minded lot—a book in which he can boldly compare some pitiful obscure postster with one of the great literary glories of the age; in which he can undeniably sacrifice truth to

THE SYDNEY MORNING HERALD, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1868.

BRAZILIAN PEBBLE SPECTACLES,
Best quality, all sizes, 10s per pair.
MAC LONNELL AND CO., 265, George-street.

MARTILLI'S BRANDY, dark and pale; L'Orange's Rum, Burnett's Old Tom, JDX Gin in large cases, Hennessy's Cognac, and ham, pig, calves, &c.

Shipments made to LA Hogue, and Ascalon, now ready to SELL at the Under-signed.

TUCKER and CO., 379, 288, George-street.

TO PRIVATE FAMILIES, Hotelkeepers, and others.

—Pure Australian WINE, white and red, from the finest vineyards in the Hunter River district, 4s per gallon by the quarter-cask, for cash. Hazlewood and CO., Lime-street.

FOR SALE, First-class HACK, Saddle, and Bridle, £6 the lot. A. MANNER, 80, Hunter-street.

FOR HIRE, Horses, Carriages, Buggies, Dog-carts, &c. £18, 250, Pitt-street.

FOR SALE, a good sound HANSON CAB, price £35, at SHAUGHNESSY'S, 191, Cumberland-street.

FOR SALE, the Steeplechase HORSE, aged, and perfectly sound, the property of Colonel WADDY, who is about to leave the colony. Apply at Victoria Barracks.

ON MINIBUS and 3 Horses, with Harness and License, for SALE. T. GIBSON, Painter, Bathurst-street.

THE HORSE, Spring CART, and HARNESS advertised, not being in the market, SELL on Wednesday, the 21st of November, at 10 o'clock.

J. ROBERTS, 154, King-street.

FOR SALE, 2 excellent Saddle and Harness HORSES, just arrived from the country, the owner having no further use for them; one, a powerful chestnut, bought upon the trial of taking a heavy carriage and five persons upon Lapstone Hill, beyond Warragul; the other a nice bay horse, which is used to saddle. Apply to E. DUNN, Hay and Corn Dealer, Rushcutter's Bay.

STORE SHEEP, THOMAS DAWSON has for SALE Prime STORE WETHERS, in lots to suit purchasers.

STORE SHEEP, for SALE, large framed, fine wool, at Riverstone. Mr. McCULLOCH, 161, Pitt-street.

WAVERLEY CRESCENT EXTENSION—The Under-signed are prepared to SELL by PRIVATE CONTRACT, Allotments for the above house and detached locality.

BREWSTER and TREBICK, Squatney's Exchange, 297, George-street.

FOR SALE, a fresh-field Brick HOUSE, Apply to C. PHILPOTT, Australia-street, Newtown.

SALES BY AUCTION.

Six first-class Country Horses.

GOLDSBROUGH, BURT, and CO. have received instructions to sell by auction, at their Yards, THIS DAY, the 20th, Six first-class hacks and harness horses, from Gladstones.

Horses
Vehicles
Sheep, and Lambs.

GOLDSBROUGH, BURT, and CO. will sell by auction, at their Yards, THIS DAY, at 11 o'clock.

Hacks, harness horses, and vehicles
100 prime ewes, &c.

At 12 o'clock,
650 sheep
50 lambs.

500 sheep
50 lambs.

GOLDSBROUGH, BURT, and CO. have received instructions to sell by auction, at their Yards, THIS DAY, at 12 o'clock.

130 prime ewes, Christian's
130 lamb, &c.

130 little wethers, Dury's

150 little ewes, &c.

20 little lambs, &c.

200 store weavers, shorn, Buchanan's.

In the Estate of G. S. Leathes, Esq.

GOLDSBROUGH, BURT, and CO. have been instructed by order of the Official Assignee in the above Estate to sell by auction, at their Bazaar, on MONDAY next, the 23rd instant, A dogcart and harness.

Fat Pigs. Fat Pigs.

MARTYN and CO. are instructed by George Loder, Esq. (Abbey Green), to sell by auction, at the Bazaar, THIS DAY, at 11 o'clock.

A lot of very prime fat porkers.

TO BE SOLD by auction, at WOOLLESTER'S, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, THIS DAY.

A horse, buggy, and harness complete.
A lot of stock horses, with saddles and bridles
10 good sheep, just arrived from the country
Draught, spring, carts, Buggies, gigs, &c.

Horseback Yards.

SULLIVAN and TINDALE have received instructions from H. and D. Pearce, Esqrs., to sell by auction, at Horseback Yards, on MONDAY next, 23rd November, at half-past 9 o'clock,
134 head of prime fat cattle, in lots to suit purchasers.

Terms, cash.

Horseback Yards.

SULLIVAN and TINDALE have received instructions from J. E. Louis, Esq., to sell by auction, at Horseback Yards, on MONDAY next, 23rd November, at half-past 9 o'clock,
180 head of prime fat cattle. In lots to suit purchasers.

Terms, cash.

Horses from the South Country.

THOMAS DAWSON is instructed by Mr. J. W. Stamford to sell by auction, at the Commonwealth Yards, THIS DAY, the 20th instant, at half-past 9 o'clock.

40 head broken and unbroken hacks, match pairs and heavy draught horses, selected principally from the celebrated stud of William Davis, Esq., of Ginninderra, and are without exception the finest lot that have been submitted to the public for some time past.

Terms, cash.

Prime Mutton! Prime Mutton!

At the Meats Shop, Railway Station.

THOMAS ARGENT will sell by auction, at the Meats Shop, Railway Station, THIS DAY, at 12 o'clock noon, to 200 carcasses of prime mutton, in lots.

Terms, cash.

S. GRAHAM will sell by auction, at the Railway Terminus, THIS DAY, at 10 o'clock, Hay, straw, &c., by the truck.

Terms, cash.

JOHN B. LAVERACK will sell by public auction, THIS DAY, at 10 o'clock, at the Railway Station, Hay, straw, maize, &c. Terms, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

ELLIS and CO. will sell by auction, at the Railway, at 10 o'clock, THIS DAY, Oats, hay, straw, &c., lucerne.

At Farmers' Home Yards, 697, George-street South, at 11 o'clock.

200 carcasses of prime mutton, in lots to suit purchasers.

At Woolpack Inn, Sussex-street, at half-past 10 o'clock sharp.

At Depot, at half-past 11 o'clock prompt, Fat calves, pigs, suckers, geese, turkeys, fowls, ducks, geese, &c.

A first-class milk cow, quiet and rear.

At half-past 1 o'clock.

Roll and leg butter, eggs, bacon, cheese (various brands) Lard in bladders, and all other farm and dairy produce.

At 3 o'clock, Hides, sheepskins, calfskins, &c.

Every FRIDAY.

BUTLER and INGLIS will sell by auction, THIS DAY, at the Railway at 10 o'clock, Hay, straw, &c., by the truck.

At the Railway Auction Mart, 793, George-street, at half-past 10 o'clock.

Calves, pigs, dead pigs, suckers, and poultry of all kinds.

At 1 o'clock.

The usual weekly sale of dairy produce, consisting of Fresh roll and log bacon from all the best houses; colonial cheese, including the "No. 6," and many other first-class brands, superior cured bacon, in lots to suit purchasers; eggs, lard, honey, &c., &c.

Terms, cash.

HENRY MORES will sell by auction, at the Railway Station, at 10 o'clock, Hay, straw, and maize.

12 o'clock, at the Square and Compass Yards, Penfolds, &c., ham, and ham, pig, calves, &c.

WILLIAM HENFREY will sell by auction, at the Railway Station, at 10 o'clock, THIS DAY, Hay, straw, &c.

Trunks, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

Tallow, Hides, &c.

JAMES DEVILIN, Jun., will sell by auction, at his Produce Stores, Circular Quay, THIS DAY, Friday, 20th November, at 11 o'clock, Casks tallow.

Hides, calf-skins, &c.

Terms, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

RIRWIN and TURNER will sell by auction, at their Produce Stores, Circular Quay, THIS DAY, Friday, 20th November, at quarter-past 11 o'clock, Casks tallow.

Hides, calf-skins, &c.

Terms, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

RIRWIN and TURNER will sell by auction, at their Produce Stores, Circular Quay, THIS DAY, Friday, 20th November, at quarter to 11 o'clock.

7 o'clock, solo, harness, yearling, and bag leather Hopkins

Dressed calf, twed, and thong leather.

Terms, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

HARRISON and JONES will sell by auction, at their Produce Stores, Circular Quay, THIS DAY, Friday, 20th November, at 11 o'clock.

200, solo, harness, yearling, and bag leather Hopkins

Dressed calf, twed, and thong leather.

Terms, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

RIRWIN and TURNER will sell by auction, at their Produce Stores, Circular Quay, THIS DAY, Friday, 20th November, at quarter to 11 o'clock.

7 o'clock, solo, harness, yearling, and bag leather Hopkins

Dressed calf, twed, and thong leather.

Terms, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

RIRWIN and TURNER will sell by auction, at their Produce Stores, Circular Quay, THIS DAY, Friday, 20th November, at quarter to 11 o'clock.

7 o'clock, solo, harness, yearling, and bag leather Hopkins

Dressed calf, twed, and thong leather.

Terms, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

RIRWIN and TURNER will sell by auction, at their Produce Stores, Circular Quay, THIS DAY, Friday, 20th November, at quarter to 11 o'clock.

7 o'clock, solo, harness, yearling, and bag leather Hopkins

Dressed calf, twed, and thong leather.

Terms, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

RIRWIN and TURNER will sell by auction, at their Produce Stores, Circular Quay, THIS DAY, Friday, 20th November, at quarter to 11 o'clock.

7 o'clock, solo, harness, yearling, and bag leather Hopkins

Dressed calf, twed, and thong leather.

Terms, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

RIRWIN and TURNER will sell by auction, at their Produce Stores, Circular Quay, THIS DAY, Friday, 20th November, at quarter to 11 o'clock.

7 o'clock, solo, harness, yearling, and bag leather Hopkins

Dressed calf, twed, and thong leather.

Terms, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

RIRWIN and TURNER will sell by auction, at their Produce Stores, Circular Quay, THIS DAY, Friday, 20th November, at quarter to 11 o'clock.

7 o'clock, solo, harness, yearling, and bag leather Hopkins

Dressed calf, twed, and thong leather.

Terms, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

RIRWIN and TURNER will sell by auction, at their Produce Stores, Circular Quay, THIS DAY, Friday, 20th November, at quarter to 11 o'clock.

7 o'clock, solo, harness, yearling, and bag leather Hopkins

Dressed calf, twed, and thong leather.

Terms, cash.

Weekly Produce Sale.

RIRWIN and TURNER will sell by auction, at their Produce Stores, Circular Quay, THIS DAY, Friday, 20th November

